一、完形填空

I had lost my wallet. There was some money in it, but far more 1, there were two tickets to a World Cup football game in it!

My 2 gave me these as a special present. She worked for the organizers so she got the 3 as a special gift. What was I going to say to her? I searched for weeks, but nothing.

Months went by and I got a new wallet, but I didn't have the heart to tell my aunt that I had 4 the tickets. "Only two months left to the World Cup!" She counted down the days and she was very 5. It was terrible.

With less than a week until the World Cup was to start, I 6 it was time for me to confess (坦白).

I went over to her place. I guessed she could see that I was 7. "I need to tell you ... She stopped me. "Good, but before you do, I wonder if you know anybody else who might 8 some tickets to the big game! I have two more."

"This solves my problem!" I thought, so I didn't tell the 9.

"Sure," I said. "I can find someone to give them to." I took the tickets, 10 as I saw my aunt's smiling face, I could not lie any longer.

"Aunt Kathy, I lost the tickets," I said. She 11 me with an understanding smile and said, "I 12. Your mother told me. It's all right. I know how sad you felt about it. It was an 13. It could happen to anyone."

I could not believe that my aunt was so 14. She found two more tickets and gave them to me as if she didn't know I had lost my tickets.

"Now you can still take your best friend to the World Cup!" she laughed.

"Yes, and I'm taking 15," I looked at my favorite aunt and said.

二、阅读单选

A lot of sportspersons did an excellent job during the Tokyo 2020 Olympic Games. What is the key to success? Some excellent sportspersons and their coaches share advice from their experiences.

Missy Franklin, swimming	Never forget being nervous is an unbelievable thing. It shows that you really care about what you are doing. Do not fear your nerves (紧张). Accept them and turn them into your own super power. And then no one can stop you!
Brad Guzan, soccer	You have to accept difficulty and know that it won't last. I try to use it as a chance to improve. You should train harder and practice different skills of the game. Hard times make you stronger as a player and as a person.
Quan Hongchan, diving	“Born in a farming family, the 14-year-old diving girl, faced the hardship bravely, and she takes the most active part in training at her age,” her coach said. “Hard work pays off. Her perfect diving performance amazed the world. Besides, an AI training system also helped her train.”
Liu Yang, gymnastics	When training for a competition, train hard with your attention. The best results come from being fully prepared. That's true for a competition or for getting ready to take a test. During the whole training, do not forget to have fun.

Su Bingtian, 100m race	You won't know whether you can be better or not until you really get there. Now I've run faster than before, so I am sure that there is still room for improvement if I increase my speed in the final meters of races. I don't really agree that this is already the best score for Asian-born runners.

“What’s the meaning of life?” This is a question we all ask ourselves at one point or another. The best answer that I came across was written by the great psychologist (心理学家), Viktor Frankle. He wrote that “The meaning of life is to give life meaning.”

When I was a young boy, I gave my life meaning by simply playing, running, jumping, swimming, laughing and riding my bike.

When I went to school, I gave my life meaning by learning, studying hard, getting good grades and trying to make my mom and dad proud.

When I was a teenager, I found meaning in playing sports and hanging out with my friends.

In college, I found my life meaning by deciding what I wanted to study and what job I would prepare for.

When I was working as a teacher, I found meaning in helping to open young minds to new ideas and old wisdom.

When I married and had kids, I found meaning in protecting and watching over those I loved. When I found out both of my sons were mentally handicapped (弱智的), I found meaning in loving them, caring for them and learning so much from them about life, love, patience, faith and joy.

As I grew older, I began to understand meaning isn't something that comes and goes. We can give meaning to every moment of our lives. We can bring meaning to the thoughts we have. We can bring meaning to the things we do. We can bring meaning to the hearts we touch. All we have to do is to love.

It is love that makes life worth living. It is love that gives life meaning.

- A. met B. trusted C. spread D. kept
20. From the passage, we know the writer used to be _____.
- A. a teacher B. a sportsman C. a writer D. a psychologist
21. In which way does the writer show the opinion?
- A. By listing numbers. B. By asking questions.
C. By comparing the facts. D. By sharing his stories.
22. The best title for the passage might be _____.
- A. My Life Skills B. My Life Story
C. The Meaning of Life D. The Love for Children

Once upon a time, a king went on a visit to neighboring kingdoms. He was gifted a pair of baby macaw parrots, a red one and a blue one, by the king of the last kingdom that he visited. They were the most beautiful birds he had ever seen. So, after returning to his kingdom, he called for a bird trainer and asked him to train the macaw parrots.

The king also set a place in the palace garden for the parrots. He often looked at them from his palace window. One day, the trainer came to the palace and told the king that the red parrot was flying high in the sky. However, the other one was not moving from his branch (树枝) since the day he had arrived from the last kingdom the king visited.

Hearing this, the king sent for other trainers from the nearby kingdoms. They all tried their best, but couldn't make the parrot fly! The parrot was not moving from his branch at all. Finally, after trying everything, the king thought that maybe he needed someone who might know their nature well. He asked a courtier (大臣) to get a farmer from the countryside and take him to the parrot to see if he could solve the problem.

The next morning, the king was excited to see the parrot flying high above the palace garden. He asked his courtier to call that farmer to meet him. The courtier hurried to call the farmer, who came and stood before the king. The king asked him, “How did you make the parrot fly?”

With his hands folded politely, the farmer said to the king, “It was very easy, my king. I simply cut the branch where the bird was sitting.”

- C. Working hard will make you happy and successful.
- D. Stepping out of comfortable situation helps you grow.

In 2021, China’s education system announced a new “Double Reduction” policy (“双减”政策). “Double Reduction” refers to a reduction in the total amount and time of school homework and a reduction of after-school classes.

“The policy really helps me,” Shen Yuzhe, a 13-year-old boy from Beijing said. He is happy that he has less homework than before and he can finish it at school with no need to take it home. “I’m also happy to find there are fewer exams. Besides, teachers now teach at a much slower pace so that we have enough time to understand what we have learned. We don’t need to buy workbooks anymore and the exercises are mainly from the textbook,” Shen Yuzhe said.

“The best thing about the ‘Double Reduction’ is the increased time in after-school activities such as dancing, volleyball and drama. Zhang Hangming from Tianjin is also excited. He has joined a group called “Leadership Development”, learning all kinds of useful skills. He likes it because teachers are also giving them more chances to learn from real life. For example, they went to research plants in a field during a science class. He believes that is a much better way to learn than just studying the books.

Some people welcome the policy while others are still worried. Yu Zhiyue, a middle school student in Jiangsu, still feels tired. “With the ‘Double Reduction’, I have really got less homework to do. But my mother is worried that I will lose the chance to review what I’ve learned in class without enough homework. So I have lots of after-school classes. Since I can only take these classes on weekdays now, weekdays have become especially long and tiring for me. From Monday to Friday, I need to take online classes at home after I come back from school,” she said. “My parents told me the rules had changed but the competition had not gone away.”

27. Shen Yuzhe likes the policy because _____.
- A. he has less homework and fewer exams B. he has more after-school activities
 C. he takes after-school classes on weekdays D. he has chances to learn from real life
28. Yu Zhiyue’s mother may agree that _____.
- A. children should have time to relax B. it’s better to learn by reading books
 C. children still need to study very hard D. it’s important to develop useful skills
29. The purpose of the passage is mainly to _____.
- A. show the influence of the policy on students B. introduce the importance of the policy
 C. explain the reason why the policy is popular D. encourage students to do less homework
